ARCHAEOLOGICAL FIELD TECHNICIAN

About Antiquity Consulting

Established in 2018, Antiquity Consulting strives to set new standards in cultural resource management in the Pacific Northwest. Our mission is to provide our clients with the highest quality archaeological and historical services through integrity, efficiency, equity, and excellence. We recognize that professional heritage management reduces risks to projects while honoring the Pacific Northwest's diverse heritage.

Archaeological Field Technician Responsibilities

As an archaeological field technician at Antiquity you will work with a team of professionals directly reporting to a project Archaeological Field Director to conduct shovel probe surveys and excavate test units in support of cultural resource management assessments. You will be responsible for professionally and efficiently conducting archaeological surveys, which includes fast-paced excavation with manual tools, soil analysis and recordation, and artifact identification. Work sites range from active urban construction sites to remote forested locations which require off-trail hiking while safely carrying personal gear and cumbersome work equipment in all weather conditions.

Schedule

Antiquity is currently accepting applications for on-call archaeological field technicians. Seasonal work sessions are typically scheduled as 4/10s with 3-day weekends.

Qualifications

Antiquity's Archaeological Field Technicians have specialized cultural expertise or have a BA in Anthropology/Archaeology/History/Geology or a closely related field. Tribal members are encouraged to apply, regardless of archaeological experience.

Job Location

The Antiquity office is located in Olympia, WA. Field work is typically in Grays Harbor, Mason, Thurston, Pierce, Lewis, Pacific, and Cowlitz counties.

Compensation

Archaeological Field Technicians wages start at $20/hour. Travel is compensated at GSA mileage and per diem rates.
